

of the Jesuits.—Missions are established on the lakes.—Joliet and Marquette discover the Mississippi.—Descend the river.—Return to Michigan.—La Salle passes through the lakes.—Descends the Illinois.—Goes to Canada.—Returns.—And explores the Mississippi to the gulf.—Sails for France.—Returns with a colony.—Reaches Texas.—Sets out for Canada.—Is murdered.—French posts are established.—The Ohio valley to be occupied.—The animosity of France and England leads to war.—The frontiersmen of the two nations come in conflict.—The Ohio Company is organized.—Obtains a grant of land.—Bienville explores and claims the Ohio valley.—Gist traverses the country to the falls of the Ohio.—The French fortify Le Boeuf and Venango.—Attack a British post.—Gist makes a second exploration.—An English colony on the Youghiogeny.—The Indians favor the English.—The Half-King goes to Erie.—The chiefs confer with Franklin.—Dinwiddie sends a despatch to St. Pierre.—Washington is chosen for the mission.—Sets out by way of Will's Creek to the site of Pittsburg.—And thence to Le Boeuf.—Washington confers with St. Pierre.—And returns to Virginia.—Hardships of the journey.—Trent begins a fort at the fork of the Ohio.—The French capture the place.—And build Du Quesne.—Washington is sent to retake the fort. . . . 245-255.

CHAPTER XXXI.

CAMPAIGNS OF WASHINGTON AND BRADDOCK.

Washington marches to Great Meadows.—Builds Fort Necessity.—Attacks and defeats Jumonville.—Extends the road toward Du Quesne.—De Villiers approaches.—Attacks Fort Necessity.—And compels a surrender.—An American congress assembles at Albany.—Franklin plans a union.—The colonies reject the constitution.—France sends soldiers to America.—Braddock is sent by England.—He confers with the governors.—Plans four campaigns.—Marches his army to Fort Cumberland.—Proceeds against Du Quesne.—Approaches the fort.—Meets the French and Indians.—And is terribly defeated.—Washington saves the remnant of the army.—Death of Braddock.—Dunbar retreats.—Destroys the stores.—Evacuates Fort Cumberland.—Retires to Philadelphia. . . . 255-261.

CHAPTER XXXII.

RUIN OF ACADIA.

Nova Scotia under English rule.—Lawrence fears an insurrection.—Is authorized to subdue the French inhabitants.—The English fleet leaves Boston.—The French forts on the Bay of Fundy.—The fleet arrives at Beau-Sejour.—The place is besieged.—And obliged to surrender.—The other forts capitulate.—The British officers determine to exile the inhabitants.—The country is laid waste.—And the people carried into banishment. . . . 261-264.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

EXPEDITIONS OF SHIRLEY AND JOHNSON.

A campaign is planned against Niagara.—Shirley commands.—Proceeds to Oswego.—Wastes the time.—Marches homeward.—Oswego is rebuilt.—Johnson and Lyman go against the French on Lake Champlain.—Build Fort Edward.—Form a camp on Lakt George.—Dieskau approaches.—Proceeds by way of Wood Creek against Fort Edward.—Meets the English.—And drives them to the camp.—The battle.—The French are defeated.—Dieskau is killed.—The English lose heavily.—Johnson builds Fort William Henry.—The French reinforce their forts. . . . 264-266.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

TWO YEARS OF DISASTER.

Shirley becomes commander-in-chief.—Washington repels the Indians.—Franklin defends Pennsylvania.—The campaigns of 1756 are planned.—The military forces of America are consolidated.—Loudoun is commander-in-chief.—He and Abercrombie arrive in New York with soldiers and supplies.—England declares war.—Abercrombie goes to Albany.—And stays there.—Montcalm besieges and captures Oswego.—The Delawares revolt.—And are punished.—Loudoun burrows at Albany.—The French strengthen their forts.—The conquest of Louisburg is planned.—Loudoun proceeds to Halifax.—Holbourn joins him.—They muster and do nothing.—Loudoun returns to New York.—Montcalm and the Iroquois besiege and capture Fort William Henry.—The Indians massacre the prisoners.—Review of the situation. . . . 267-270.

CHAPTER XXXV.

TWO YEARS OF SUCCESSES.

Pitt becomes prime minister.—Loudoun is deposed.—Abercrombie succeeds.—An able corps of generals sent to America.—Three campaigns are planned.—Amherst and Wolfe proceed against Louisburg.—Besiege and take the fortress.—Abercrombie attacks Ticonderoga.—And is repulsed with great loss.—Bradstreet takes Fort Frontenac.—Montcalm advises peace.—Forbes marches against Du Quesne.—Grant is defeated.—Washington leads the advance.—The French abandon and burn Du Quesne.—The place named Pittsburg.—Amherst commander-in-chief.—Relative strength of the English and the French.—Pitt plans the conquest of Canada.—Prideaux defeats the French before Niagara.—And captures the fortress.—Amherst takes Ticonderoga and Crown Point.—Wolfe proceeds against Quebec.—Reaches the Island of Orleans.—Besieges the city.—The Lower Town is destroyed.—Montcalm's position.—The battle of Montmorenci.—Wolfe's fever.—He ascends the river.—Plans an assault.—Discover's Wolfe's Cove.—Gains the Plains of Abraham.—Fights a decisive battle.—Defeats the French.—Is slain.—Quebec capitulates.—And then Montreal.—The Cherokee revolt is quelled.—The effect of the conquest of Canada. The French outposts are included in the surrender of Montreal.—Rogers is sent to take possession of the forts.—He reaches Detroit.—Receives the surrender of Forts Miami and Ouatanow.—Mackinaw, Green Bay and St. Marie afterward capitulate.—The English treat the Red men badly.—The latter become revengeful.—They make an attempt against Detroit.—And are baffled.—Conspiracies grow rife.—Pontiac organizes a confederacy.—Makes a plot for the capture of Detroit.—And fails.—An unsuccessful siege ensues.—The savages are victorious in other quarters.—They capture most of the western forts.—The confederacy breaks up.—Pontiac is abandoned.—And killed.—The war continues on the ocean.—England is victorious.—A treaty of peace.—The terms. . . . 270-279.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

CONDITION OF THE COLONIES.

The thirteen colonies.—Institutions.—Population.—Distribution of the same.—Growth of a national character and sentiment.—Education.—Character of the same in New England.—In the South.—Colleges.—Newspapers.—Books and men.—Absence of roads.—Agriculture the predominating pursuit.—Ship-building and manufactures.—What the British Board of Trade was good for.—Reflections on the character of the Anglo-American colonists. . . . 280-284.

PART IV.

REVOLUTION AND CONFEDERATION.

A. D. 1775-1789.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

CAUSES.

Importance of the revolution.—The question decided by it.—Character of the contest.—The causes.—Great Britain claims the right of arbitrary government.—France incites the rebellion.—The disposition of the Americans encourages independence.—Public opinion leads to the same result.—The king provokes a conflict.—Parliament passes oppressive acts.—The question of taxation.—Nature of the dispute.—The Importation Act.—Its provisions.—Writs of Assistance are issued.—And resisted.—The sugar and wine duties.—The colonists refuse to pay them.—A Stamp Act is proposed.—Indignation in the colonies.—The question of the Indian war-debt arises.—The Stamp Act is passed.—Its provisions.—The news is received in America.—The wrath of the people.—Scene in the House of Burgesses.—Patrick Henry's speech.—Passage of the resolutions.—Other assemblies pursue a similar course.—The first Colonial Congress.—A declaration of Rights is adopted.—Memorials to the king and Parliament.—The Stamp Act is resisted.—And the stamps destroyed.—Suspension of business.—The Sons of Liberty.—A non-importation agreement is made.—The wrath of England.—Camden and Pitt defend the colonists.—Repeal of the Stamp Act.—Joy follows.—Townshend renews the scheme.—Secures the passage of a glass and tea-tax.—The Americans resist the act.—Circular of Massachusetts.—Seizure of a sloop at Boston.—Insurrection of the people.—Gage takes possession of Boston.—Is ordered to arrest the patriots.—Rebellion of Virginia and North Carolina.—Conflict at New York.—The Boston massacre.—Repeal of the duties.—Passage of the Salary Act.—Burning of the Gaspee.—Stratagem of the ministry.—Tea is shipped to America.—Is spoiled at Charleston.—Refused at New York and Philadelphia.—And poured overboard at Boston.—Passage of the Port Bill.—Opposition of the Burgesses.—The charter of Massachusetts is annulled.—The people declared rebels.—The second Congress assembles.—Resolutions and addresses.—A British army is ordered to America.—Boston Neck fortified.—Military stores removed.—The assembly refuses to disband.—War becomes inevitable. . . . 285-296.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

THE BEGINNING.

The patriots remove their stores.—Gage plans to destroy them.—Pitcairn is sent for that purpose.—Dawes and Revere arouse the people.—The British reach Lexington.—Fire on the patriots.—Proceed to Concord.—Ransack the village.—Are attacked.—And driven back to Boston.—The country is fired.—The patriots gather at Cambridge.—Allen and Arnold march against Ticonderoga.—And capture the fortress.—The British are reinforced.—Proclamation of Gage.—His plans.—The Americans fortify Breed's Hill.—Amazement of the British.—The battle.—Excitement of the people.—The North Carolinians declare independence.—The Colonial Congress assembles.—An appeal to the king.—Washington commander-in-chief.—Sketch of his life.—His duties and embarrassments.—Organization of the army.—Royal rule is overthrown.—Struggle with Dunmore.—Expedition against Quebec.—Led by Schuyler, Montgomery and Arnold.—Schuyler falls sick.—Montgomery takes Montreal.—Hardships of Arnold's march.—He and Montgomery unite against Quebec.—The town is invested.—The assault and defeat.—Fall of Montgomery.—The expedition is abandoned.—Sketch of Montgomery. 297-305.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

THE WORK OF '76.

The king answers the colonies.—Howe succeeds Gage.—Siege of Boston.—The British evacuate the city.—The Americans enter.—Public rejoicings.—Washington goes to New York.—Clinton threatens the city.—Cornwallis and Parker proceed against Charleston.—Rising of the Carolinians.—The attack on Moultrie.—Repulse of the British.—Distresses of the army.—Great Britain hires the Hessians.—And makes new levies.—Exasperation of the patriots.—The question of independence.—Lee's resolutions.—Debates.—A committee is appointed.—The Declaration of Independence adopted.—And received with enthusiasm.—Its leading principles.—Howe returns.—Lands an army.—Attempts to open negotiations.—And fails.—The British advance on Long Island.—Fight a battle.—And defeat the patriots.—Washington saves the army.—Discouragement of the people.—The British take New York.—Negotiations are again attempted.—But fail.—Movements of the two armies.—Battle of White Plains.—Disposition of the American forces.—Notice of Hamilton.—The capture of Fort Washington.—Fort Lee is taken.—The Americans retreat across New Jersey.—The pursuit ends.—Enlargement of Washington's powers.—British successes in Rhode Island.—Lee's capture.—Washington recruits his army.—Recrosses the Delaware.—Defeats the British at Trenton.—Effect of the battle.—Alarm of the British.—Robert Morris to the rescue.—Washington threatens the British posts. . . . 305-317.

CHAPTER XL.

OPERATIONS OF '77.

The British advance against Trenton.—Washington withdraws his forces.—Attacks Princeton.—And wins a victory.—Takes post at Morristown.—The British at New Brunswick.—Cornwallis on the defensive.—Destruction of stores at Peekskill.—Lincoln attacked at Boundbrook.—Tryon burns Danbury.—Is attacked and driven away.—Meigs takes Sag Harbor.—Washington advances into New Jersey.—The British threaten Philadelphia.—Retire to Amboy.—Leave the State.—Barton captures Prescott.—Congress returns to Philadelphia.—Help from France.—Coming of La Fayette and De Kalb.—Plan of Burgoyne's campaign.—The invasion begins.—Fall of Crown Point and Ticonderoga.—The battle of Hubbardton.—Capture of Whitehall.—Fort Edward is taken.—Schuyler retreats to the Mohawk.—The British advance is impeded.—The battle of Bennington.—St. Leger besieges Schuyler.—Herkimer brings relief.—And is defeated.—Arnold advances.—The Indians desert the British.—St. Leger retreats.—Discouragement of Burgoyne.—Gathering of the Americans.—Burgoyne at Saratoga.—The first battle.—Critical condition of the British.—A diversion is attempted by Clinton.—But fails.—The second battle.—The Americans victorious.—Burgoyne is surrounded.—And driven to surrender.—The army of the North relieves Washington.—The movement of Howe against Philadelphia.—He enters the Chesapeake.—The battle of Brandywine.—Retreat of the Americans.—Washington advances to Warren's Tavern.—A storm prevents the battle.—Countermarching of the armies.—The British capture Philadelphia.—Congress adjourns to Lancaster.—Washington on Skippack Creek.—The battle of Germantown.—Capture of Forts Mercer and Mifflin.—The Americans at Whitemarsh.—Adventure of Lydia Darrah.—The British winter at Philadelphia.—The Americans at Valley Forge.—Sorrows of Washington. 317-328.

CHAPTER XLI.

FRANCE TO THE RESCUE.

Silas Deane is sent to France.—His mission.—France favors the Americans.—Supplies are sent to the patriots.—Steuben arrives.—Lee and Franklin are appointed to negotiate a treaty.—Franklin's influence at the French court.—A treaty is concluded.—Sketch of Franklin.—Arrival of D'Estaing's fleet.—War threatened between France and England.—Effort of Great Britain for peace.—The British fleet at Philadelphia.—Withdrawal of the squadron.—The city evacuated.—Washington pursues.—The battle of Monmouth.—Lee disobeys orders.—Is court-martialed and dismissed.—British concentrate at New York.—The city threatened by D'Estaing.—He sails against Rhode Island.—Sullivan co-operates against Newport.—Howe follows D'Estaing.—Both squadrons shattered by a storm.—The siege of Newport.—Abandonment of the enterprise.—Destruction of American shipping.—Byron succeeds Howe.—Marauding of the British.—The Wyoming massacre.—Ruin of Cherry Valley.—The expedition of Major Clarke.—The French and British fleets sail away.—A force is sent against Savannah.—Capture of the city.—The situation. 323-333.

CHAPTER XLII.

MOVEMENTS OF '79.

Hardships of the soldiers.—Tryon's expedition.—Is attacked by the militia.—Putnam's exploit.—Fall of Stony Point and Verplank's.—Insurrection in Virginia.—Tryon invades Connecticut.—Destruction of East Haven, Fairfield, and Norwalk.—Stony Point is retaken by Wayne.—Lee captures Jersey City.—An American flotilla sails to the Penobscot.—Is ruined.—Sullivan ravages the Indian country.—The British evacuate Rhode Island.—War in the South.—Fort Sunbury is taken.—Fall of Augusta.—Anderson defeats the Tories.—Pickens gains a victory.—Augusta is evacuated.—Defeat of Lincoln's army.—The militia rally.—Lincoln takes the field.—Threatens Augusta.—Returns to Charleston.—Is beaten at Stono Ferry.—Suspension of activity.—D'Estaing arrives.—Siege of Savannah.—The unsuccessful assault.—Paul Jones's victory.—Reflections. 334-339.

CHAPTER XLIII.

REVERSES AND TREASON.

Operations in the North suspended.—Ternay's fleet arrives.—Campaigns are planned.—Arbuthnot and Clinton besiege Charleston.—The city is taken.—Ravages of Tarleton.—Plan of the British to conquer South Carolina.—Capture of Ninety-Six.—Cornwallis's success.—Tarleton's massacre.—South Carolina is subjugated.—Clinton returns to New York.—Marion and Sumter's bands.—They scour the country.—Their victories.—Gates takes command.—The British at Camden.—Gates advances against them.—Is met and defeated.—Is superseded by Greene.—Sumter's corps is broken up.—Cruelty of the British.—Rawdon advances into North Carolina.—Ferguson's Tories are defeated.—Financial distresses.—Sacrifices of Morris.—The treason of Arnold.—Sketch of his career.—André is sent to a conference.—The interview.—André attempts to return to New York.—Is captured, condemned, and executed.—Treaty with Holland. 339-345.

CHAPTER XLIV.

THE END.

Desperate condition of the army.—The Pennsylvania line revolt.—Mutiny of the Jersey brigade.—Robert Morris secretary of finance.—Champe attempts to capture Arnold.—Fails.—Arnold's expedition to Virginia.—Second plan to capture him.—He becomes commander-in-chief in Virginia.—Is superseded.—And ordered out of the State.—Leads a band into Connecticut.—Captures Fort Griswold.—Greene in the South.—Advances into South Carolina.—Morgan at the Cowpens.—Is attacked by Tarleton.—But defeats him.—Cornwallis attempts to cut off Morgan's retreat.—Greene takes command.—Crosses the Catawba.—Race for the Yadkin.—Greene wins it.—Race for the Dan.—Greene wins it.—Chagrin of the British.—Greene turns upon the enemy.—Lee disperses the Tories.—Greene moves forward to Guilford.—Cornwallis attacks him.—An indecisive battle.—The British retreat to Wilmington.—Cornwallis goes to Virginia.—The Americans advance into South Carolina.—The battle of Hobkirk's Hill.—The British retire to Eutaw Springs.—The siege of Ninety-Six.—The place is abandoned by the enemy.—Greene in the Highlands.—Sumter, Lee, and Marion overrun the country.—Execution of Hayne.—Greene advances against Eutaw Springs.—The battle.—The British retreat to Charleston.—The situation.—The campaign in Virginia.—Cornwallis ravages the State.—Marches down the James.—Is attacked by Wayne.—Proceeds to Portsmouth.—And thence to Yorktown.—The Army of the North comes down upon him.—The French fleet co-operates.—Yorktown is besieged.—And Cornwallis's army taken.—Rejoicings.—Fall of the king's party in Parliament.—Negotiations for peace.—A treaty is concluded.—Its terms.—Carleton supersedes Clinton.—Evacuation of New York.—Washington bids farewell to his officers.—Retires to private life. 345-356.

CHAPTER XLV.

CONFEDERATION AND UNION.

Bad condition of the government.—Its defects.—Franklin pleads for union.—A committee appointed to prepare a Constitution.—The Articles of Confederation are adopted.—The colonies are slow to ratify.—The Confederation.—Defects of the same.—Chaotic condition of affairs.—A firmer Constitution is projected.—The convention at Annapolis.—Adjournment to Philadelphia.—The Constitution is reported to the convention.—And adopted.—The last colonial Congress.—Its final work.—The North-western Territory is organized.—The several States cede their rights away.—St. Clair appointed governor.—Plan of organization.—Slavery is restricted.—The people divide on the question of adopting the Constitution.—Sketch of Hamilton.—Character of the Constitution.—Amendments thereto.—The struggle in the colonial conventions.—Ratification by eleven States.—Washington is chosen President.—Joan Adams for the vice-presidency.—Washington's journey to New York.—Conclusion. 356-362.

PART V.

NATIONAL PERIOD.

CHAPTER XLVI.

WASHINGTON'S ADMINISTRATION.

Washington is inaugurated President.—And the new government organized.—The country is beset with difficulties.—A cabinet is formed.—The Supreme Court is organized.—Rhode Island and North Carolina ratify the Constitution.—Washington makes a tour through New England.—Presidential etiquette.—Hamilton's financial measures.—The seat of government is fixed.—An Indian war breaks out.—Harmar marches against the Miamis.—Is defeated on the Maumee.—The Bank of the United States is established.—Vermont is admitted into the Union.—The first census.—St. Clair is sent against the Indians.—His army is defeated.—The wrath of Washington.—St. Clair is superseded by Wayne.—Kentucky is admitted.—Washington re-elected.—The foreign relations of the government are troubled.—Genet's conduct.—Fouchet supersedes him.—Troubles in the President's cabinet.—Antagonism of Jefferson and Hamilton.—The whisky insurrection breaks out.—Is suppressed by Lee.—Wayne invades the Indian country.—Defeats the Red men at Waynesfield.—Compels a cession of territory.—Dies.—Great Britain orders the seizure of American vessels.—Jay procures reparation and a treaty.—Popular opposition thereto.—The compact with Spain.—Peace is purchased of Algiers.—Tennessee is admitted.—Washington issues his Farewell address.—The candidates for the Presidency.—Adams is elected.—Jefferson for Vice-President. 363-371.

CHAPTER XLVII.

ADAMS'S ADMINISTRATION.

Sketch of John Adams.—Opposition to the new administration.—France demands an alliance.—Orders the destruction of American commerce.—Pinckney is dismissed.—The extra session of Congress.—Gerry, Marshall, and Pinckney are sent to France.—The Directory want money.—Pinckney's answer.—An American army is organized.—Washington commander-in-chief.—The work of the navy.—Truxtun's victories.—Doings of Talleyrand.—Napoleon seeks peace.—The successful embassy of Murray, Ellsworth, and Davie.—Death of Washington.—Close of the administration.—Growth of the country.—The Alien and Sedition laws.—Overthrow of the Federal party.—Jefferson is elected President.—And Burr Vice-President. 372-376.

CHAPTER XLVIII.

JEFFERSON'S ADMINISTRATION.

Sketch of Jefferson.—He puts Democrats in office.—Ohio is admitted.—Indiana and Mississippi organized.—Louisiana is purchased from France.—Boundaries.—The territory of Orleans is set off.—John Marshall in the chief-justiceship.—The Mediterranean pirates.—Preble is sent against them.—The Philadelphia is captured.—Retaken and burned.—The siege of Tripoli.—Expedition of Eaton.—Yusef signs a treaty.—The duel of Burr and Hamilton.—Jefferson is re-elected.—Michigan is organized.—Lewis and Clarke explore Oregon.—Burr makes a conspiracy.—Is tried for treason.—British aggressions on American commerce.—England blockades the coast of France.—Napoleon retaliates.—Great Britain forbids the coasting trade.—An old abuse revived.—The rule of 1756 again asserted.—The effect on American commerce.—The English theory of citizenship.—The object of that theory.—The attack of the Leopard on the Chesapeake.—Passage of the Embargo Act.—The Orders in Council and Milan Decree.—Fulton and his steamboat.—Invention of the torpedo.—Summary of events. 376-388.

CHAPTER XLIX.

MADISON'S ADMINISTRATION AND THE WAR OF '12.

Sketch of the life and previous services of Madison.—His politics.—The Non-intercourse Act takes the place of the Embargo.—Erskine promises the repeal of the Orders in Council.—The promise not fulfilled.—Bonaparte makes a decree.—And then revokes it.—Obstinacy of Great Britain.—A crisis is reached.—Third census.—Tecumtha and the Prophet.—Harrison purchases lands.—Tecumtha refuses to ratify.—Harrison marches up the Wabash Valley.—Approaches the Prophet's town.—Is attacked by night.—And routs the savages.—Fight of the President and Little Belt.—The twelfth Congress.—War inevitable.—The President's timid disposition.—Henry's conspiracy is discovered.—Nature of the plot.—Effect of the disclosure.—British vessels are embargoed.—Louisiana is admitted.—War declared against England.—Preparations.—Relative strength of the belligerents.—Hull's campaign.—He marches to the head of Lake Erie.—Reaches Detroit.—Invades Canada.—Retreats.—Van Horne's defeat.—Miller's victory.—Siege of Detroit.—Hull's disgraceful surrender.—He is convicted of cowardice.—Capture and burning of Fort Dearborn.—Character assumed by the war.—Sketch of the American defences.—The Constitution captures the Guerriere.—The Wasp the Frolic.—The Poictiers the Wasp.—The United States the Macedonian.—The Essex the Nocton.—And the Constitution the Java.—Effect of these victories.—Comment of the English newspapers.—Van Rensselaer moves against Queenstown.—Carries the batteries.—Death of Brock.—The Americans entrench.—But are forced to surrender.—Smyth succeeds Van Rensselaer.—And makes a fool of himself.—The Americans at Black Rock cross and recross the river.—Madison re-elected. 388-399.

CHAPTER L.

WAR OF '12.—CONTINUED.

Plan of the campaigns of '13.—The Americans capture Frenchtown.—Are assailed by Proctor.—Surrender.—And are butchered.—Harrison at Fort Meigs.—He is besieged.—Clay raises the siege.—Proctor and Tecumtha return.—Attack Fort Stephenson.—And are defeated by Croghan.—Affairs on Lake Erie.—Perry builds a fleet.—Attacks the British squadron.—And gains a signal victory.—Harrison embarks his forces to Malden.—Follows the British and Indians to the Thames.—And routs them in battle.—The Creeks massacre the garrison at Fort Mims.—Jackson and Coffee with the Tennesseans.—They burn Tallushatchie.—Battles of Talladega and Autosse.—Winter and starvation.—Battle of Emucfau.—And Horse Shoe Bend.—Dearborn proceeds against Toronto.—Battle at the water's edge.—The Americans capture the town.—The British attack Sackett's Harbor.—The Americans on the Niagara.—They storm Fort George.—Suspension of operations.—Wilkinson is made commander-in-chief.—Expedition against Montreal.—The battle of Chrysler's Field.—The expedition is abandoned.—Winter quarters at Fort Covington.—McClure evacuates Fort George.—Burns Newark.—The British retaliate.—The Hornet captures the Peacock.—The Chesapeake is taken by the Shannon.—Death of Lawrence.—Capture of the Argus.—The Enterprise takes the Boxer.—The Essex is captured by the Phoebe and Cherub.—A British fleet bombards Lewiston.—Marauding in the Chesapeake. 400-407.

CHAPTER LI.

CAMPAIGNS OF '14.

Scott and Ripley capture Erie.—Battles of Chippewa and Niagara.—The Americans retreat to Erie.—Siege of that place by the British.—They are driven off.—Winter quarters at Black Rock.—Wilkinson again invades Canada.—Is defeated at La Colle.—And retreats to Plattsburg.—McDonough's squadron on the lake.—The British advance.—Attack by land and water.—And are defeated.—Cochrane and Ross in the Chesapeake.—Barney destroys his vessels.—Battle of Bladensburg.—Washington is captured by the British.—Public buildings burned.—Alexandria pays a ransom.—The Hart.—Siege of Baltimore.—Ravages in New England.—The Federal peace party.—The Hartford Convention.—Jackson captures Pensacola.—Takes command at New Orleans.—Approach of the British.—Skirmishing and fighting.—The decisive battle.—Ruin of Packenham's army.—The news of peace.—Sea-fights afterward.—The treaty of Ghent.—Great rejoicings.—Terms of the treaty.—Condition of the country.—Rechartering of the United States Bank.—The Mediterranean pirates again.—Decatur sent out against them.—He captures a Moorish ship.—And then another.—Enters the Bay of Algiers.—And dictates the terms of peace.—Indiana is admitted.—Liberia founded.—Monroe is elected President. 407-416.

CHAPTER LII.

MONROE'S ADMINISTRATION.

The new President and his policy.—The cabinet.—Revival of the country.—Demand for the recognition of Hayti.—Treaty with the Northwestern Indians.—Mississippi is admitted.—The pirates of Amelia Island dispersed.—The question of internal improvements arises.—The canal from Buffalo to Albany.—The Seminole war breaks out.—Jackson invades the hostile country.—Captures St. Marks.—Hangs Arbuthnot and Ambrister.—Takes Pensacola.—An excitement follows.—Which leads to the cession of Florida.—Great financial crisis of 1819.—Illinois is admitted.—And Alabama.—Arkansas is organized.—And Maine admitted.—And Missouri.—The slavery agitation.—And Missouri Compromise.—Its terms.—Monroe and Tompkins are re-elected.—Comodore Porter suppresses piracy in the West Indies.—Sympathy of the United States for the South American republics.—The Monroe Doctrine.—The visit of La Fayette.—Excitement attending the presidential election.—John Quincy Adams chosen. 416-423.

CHAPTER LIII.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS'S ADMINISTRATION.

Sketch of the President.—Partisan opposition in Congress.—Internal improvements favored by the executive.—Trouble with Georgia about the lands of the Creeks.—Settled by a treaty.—Death of Adams and Jefferson.—The Masonic excitement in

New York.—Discussion of the tariff in Congress.—A protective duty laid on fabrics.—A new departure in American history.—Adams renominated for the Presidency.—General Jackson put forward by the Democrats.—And elected. 423-426.

CHAPTER LIV.

JACKSON'S ADMINISTRATION.

Sketch of Jackson's life and character.—He fills the offices with his political friends.—Opposes the rechartering of the United States Bank.—And vetoes the bill.—The new political organization.—Sketch of parties.—The tariff question again.—South Carolina attempts nullification.—Debate of Webster and Hayne.—The President's proclamation.—South Carolina recedes from her position.—Mr. Clay's tariff compromise.—The Black Hawk war breaks out.—Generals Scott and Atkinson are sent against the Red men.—Who are driven to submission.—The difficulty with the Cherokees.—Character of that race.—The wrongs done to them.—Scott compels their removal to the West.—A second Seminole war.—The arrest of Osceola.—His release and conspiracy.—Dade's massacre.—Murder of General Thompson.—Clinch fights the savages and retreats.—Gaines defeats the Indians on the Withlacoochie.—Battle of the Wahoo Swamp.—A second fight.—The President orders the distribution of the funds.—A panic follows.—The President is vituperated.—Is censured by Congress.—But re-elected.—He brings France and Portugal to terms.—Death-list of eminent men.—Fires in New York and Washington.—Arkansas and Michigan admitted into the Union.—Jackson's farewell address.—Van Buren elected President. 426-436.

CHAPTER LV.

VAN BUREN'S ADMINISTRATION.

Sketch of the new executive.—Another monetary disturbance.—Continuance of the Seminole war.—Colonel Taylor hunts the savages to Lake Okeechobee.—Defeats them.—And compels submission.—The financial panic of '37.—Causes which led thereto.—Especially the Specie Circular.—The banks suspend.—Tremendous failures.—Treasury notes are issued.—The Independent Treasury Bill is discussed.—And finally passed.—Partial revival of business.—The Canada insurrection.—Affair of the Caroline.—Wool is sent to the Niagara.—Order is restored.—An early presidential canvass.—Uneventful character of Van Buren's administration.—The sixth census.—General Harrison is elected President. 436-440.

CHAPTER LVI.

ADMINISTRATIONS OF HARRISON AND TYLER.

Sketch of the President's life.—He enters upon his duties.—Falls sick.—And dies.—Tyler succeeds to the Presidency.—Sketch.—Repeal of the Independent Treasury Bill.—A bill is passed to recharter the United States Bank.—And vetoed by the President.—The bankrupt law.—Rupture between the executive and Congress.—Resignation of the cabinet.—The north-eastern boundary is settled by the Webster-Ashburton treaty.—The Rhode Island insurrection.—The suffrage party elects Dorr.—And the law-and-order party, King.—The latter is supported by the government.—Dorr's followers are scattered.—And himself convicted of treason.—But afterward pardoned.—Building and dedication of Bunker Hill monument.—The Van Rensselaer land troubles in New York.—The Mormons.—They are driven from Missouri.—Found Nauvoo.—Popular feeling against them.—Smith and his brother are murdered.—And the Mormons driven into exile.—They journey to Salt Lake.—The Texas excitement begins.—Outline of Texas history.—The people rebel against Mexico.—Battle of Gonzales.—Capture of the Alamo.—And massacre of the garrison.—The battle of San Jacinto decides the contest.—Texas independent.—Seeks admission into the Union.—Is refused at first.—The people of the United States divide on the question of annexation.—On that issue Polk is elected President.—Professor Morse and the telegraph.—Texas admitted into the Union. 440-447.

CHAPTER LVII.

POLK'S ADMINISTRATION AND THE MEXICAN WAR.

Sketch of President Polk.—Texas ratifies the annexation.—General Taylor sent to defend the country.—The boundary question.—Proposition to negotiate.—Mexico refuses.—Taylor ordered to the Neuces.—And thence to the Rio Grande.—He establishes a post at Point Isabel.—And builds Fort Brown.—Beginning of hostilities by the Mexicans.—Taylor retires to Point Isabel.—Mexican boasting.—Returns toward Matamoras.—Meets the Mexicans.—Fights and gains the battles of Palo Alto and Resaca de la Palma.—Siege of Fort Brown.—News of the battles in the United States.—Declaration of War.—Plan of the campaigns.—General Wool musters the forces.—Taylor captures Matamoras.—Advances against Monterey.—Besieges and storms the town.—An armistice.—Santa Anna made President of Mexico and general of the army.—Saltillo is taken by Worth.—Victoria by Patterson.—And Tampico by Conner.—Wool advances.—And Scott assumes command.—Kearney captures Santa Fé.—Moves westward.—Is joined by Carson.—And marches to the Pacific coast.—The deeds of Colonel Fremont.—Rebellion of the Californians.—They defeat the Mexicans.—Monterey, San Diego, and Los Angeles taken.—Battle of San Gabriel.—The march and battles of Colonel Doniphan.—Taylor's and Wool's forces ordered to the coast.—Critical condition of Taylor's army.—Approach of Santa Anna.—Battle of Buena Vista.—Retirement of Taylor from the service.—Scott besieges and captures Vera Cruz.—Marches against the capital.—Battle of Cerro Gordo.—Jalapa, Perote, and Puebla are taken.—Negotiations.—The march renewed.—The army passes the Cordilleras.—Reaches Ayotla.—Turns to the left.—The approaches and fortifications of the city.—Storming of Contreras and San Antonio.—Churubusco is carried.—The Mexicans driven back to Chapultepec.—More foolish negotiations.—Scott rests his army.—And then advances.—Molino del Rey and Casa de Mata are stormed.—Chapultepec is taken.—Flight of the Mexican government.—The American army enters the city.—Santa Anna attacks the hospitals at Puebla.—Is driven off by General Lane.—Downfall of the Mexican authority.—The treaty of Gaudalupe Hidalgo.—Its terms.—Settlement of the Oregon boundary.—The international line established on the forty-ninth parallel.—The discovery of gold in California.—The excitement which ensued.—Importance of the mines.—Founding of the Smithsonian Institution.—Death of Jackson and John Quincy Adams.—Wisconsin is admitted.—Establishment of the Department of the Interior.—The canvass for President.—Rise of the Free Soil party.—The Wilmot proviso.—Election of Taylor to the presidency. 447-462.

CHAPTER LVIII.

ADMINISTRATIONS OF TAYLOR AND FILLMORE.

Sketch of the chief magistrate.—The question of slavery in California.—A territorial government is organized.—A petition for admission.—The controversy in Congress.—Other political vexations.—Clay as a peace-maker.—Passage of the Omnibus Bill.—And its provisions.—Death of the President.—The slavery excitement subsides.

—The question not permanently settled.—Retirement of Mr. Clay.—Effects of the Omnibus Bill on the administration.—The Cuban expedition is organized.—Lopez and his associates are executed.—Important measures recommended by the President.—A difficulty arises about the coast-fisheries.—And is settled by a treaty.—The tour of Kossuth.—Arctic expeditions of Franklin, De Haven, and Kane.—Death of Calhoun, Clay, and Webster.—The Cuban excitement in Europe.—The Tripartite Treaty is proposed.—And rejected.—Everett's reply to France and Great Britain.—The candidates for the presidency.—Pierce is elected. 463-469.

CHAPTER LIX.

PIERCE'S ADMINISTRATION.

Sketch of Franklin Pierce.—A route for a Pacific railroad is explored.—Settlement of the boundary of New Mexico.—The Japanese ports are opened to the United States.—The World's Fair.—Walker organizes a filibustering expedition against Central America.—Is captured.—Makes a second descent on Nicaragua.—And then a third.—Is defeated, captured, and executed.—The Martin Koszta affair.—Cuban difficulties.—The Ostend manifesto.—A bill to organize Kansas and Nebraska is passed.—Repeal of the Missouri Compromise.—Renewal of the slavery agitation.—The troubles in Kansas.—Two territorial governments are organized.—Geary sent thither as military governor.—Marshaling of parties on the slavery question.—Buchanan is elected to the presidency. 469-474.

CHAPTER LX.

BUCHANAN'S ADMINISTRATION.

Sketch of the President.—The Dred Scott decision.—The Mormon rebellion in Utah.—Is suppressed by the army.—A difficulty arises with Paraguay.—But is settled by treaty.—The first Atlantic cable is laid.—Minnesota is admitted.—Retirement and sketch of Houston.—Death of Washington Irving.—His work in American literature.—The Personal Liberty bills.—John Brown's insurrection.—Continuance of the troubles in Kansas.—The political parties again divide on the slavery question.—The National conventions.—The candidates and the canvass.—Lincoln is elected President.—Condition of affairs in the government.—Position of Buchanan.—The drama of secession.—Seven States withdraw from the Union.—The secession conventions.—Position of Stephens.—Organization of the Provisional Confederate government.—Davis for President.—The peace movements end in failure.—Paralysis of the administration.—Seizure of forts and arsenals by the Confederates.—The strife in Kansas continues.—The Star of the West is driven off from Fort Sumter.—The President elect reaches Washington. 474-482.

CHAPTER LXI.

LINCOLN'S ADMINISTRATION AND THE CIVIL WAR.

Sketch of Abraham Lincoln.—Organization of his cabinet.—His purpose to repossess the forts of the United States.—Preparations to reinforce Fort Sumter.—Confederate movements in Charleston.—Bombardment and fall of Fort Sumter.—The event fires the nation.—The call for troops.—Secession of Virginia, Arkansas, North Carolina, and Tennessee.—The soldiers attacked in Baltimore.—Capture of Harper's Ferry and the Norfolk navy yard.—Prodigious activity and preparations.—Davis and his cabinet at Richmond. 482-485.

CHAPTER LXII.

THE CAUSES.

The causes.—First, the different construction of the Constitution in the North and the South.—Fatal character of this dispute.—Second, the system of slavery.—The cotton gin.—The Missouri agitation.—The annexation of Texas, and the Mexican War.—The nullification measures of South Carolina.—The Omnibus Bill.—The Kansas-Nebraska imbroglio.—Third, the want of intercourse between the North and the South.—Fourth, the publication of sectional books.—Fifth, the influence of demagogues. 485-488

CHAPTER LXIII.

FIRST YEAR OF THE WAR.

Advance of the Union army.—Fight at Big Bethel.—Morris and McClellan move forward in West Virginia.—Engagements at Philippi, Rich Mountain, Carrick's Ford, Carnifex Ferry, Cheat Mountain, and Romney.—The Confederates concentrate at Manassas.—The national forces advance.—The skirmish, the battle, and the rout.—Effect on the country.—The Confederate government at Richmond.—Sketch of Davis.—Affairs in Missouri.—Confederates capture Liberty.—Form Camp Jackson.—Lyon defends St. Louis.—Battles of Carthage and Springfield.—Price captures Lexington.—Fremont pursues him.—And is superseded.—Grant captures Belmont.—McClellan is made commander-in-chief.—The disaster at Ball's Bluff.—Hatteras inlet, Port Royal, and Hilton Head secured by the Federals.—Capture of Mason and Slidell.—They are released by Mr. Seward. 490-495.

CHAPTER LXIV.

CAMPAIGNS OF '62.

Extent and position of the Union forces.—The Confederates defeated on the Big Sandy and at Mill Spring.—Fort Henry is taken.—Siege and capture of Fort Donelson.—Battle of Shiloh.—Island Number Ten is taken.—The battle of Pea Ridge.—Fight of the Monitor and the Merrimac.—Burnside captures Roanoke Island, Newbern, and Beaufort.—Savannah is blockaded.—Farragut and Butler ascend the Mississippi.—Pass Forts Jackson and St. Philip.—Capture of New Orleans.—Fall of Jackson and St. Philip.—Kirby Smith invades Kentucky.—Battle of Richmond.—Bragg marches on Louisville.—The city held by Buell.—Bragg retreats.—Battle of Perryville.—Battles of Inka and Corinth.—Grant moves against Vicksburg.—Retreats.—Battle of Chickasaw Bayou.—Battle of Murfreesborough.—Banks and Jackson in the Shenandoah Valley.—Fight at Front Royal.—The Federals retreat across the Potomac.—The Confederates fall back in turn.—Battles of Cross Keys and Port Republic.—McClellan advances.—Beginning of the Peninsular campaign.—Yorktown is taken.—Then Williamsburg and West Point.—Wool captures Norfolk.—The Virginia destroyed.—Battle of Fair Oaks.—Lee made general-in-chief of the Confederates.—McClellan changes base.—The seven days' battles.—The Union army at Harrison's Landing.—Lee strikes for Washington.—Is opposed by Pope.—Flank movement of Jackson.—Battles of Manassas, Centreville, and Chantilly.—Lee invades Maryland.—Harper's Ferry is taken.—Engagement at South Mountain.—Battle of Antietam.—Confederates retreat.—Burnside in command.—Plans a campaign against Richmond.—Advances against Fredericksburg.—And is defeated. 495-510.

CHAPTER LXV.

THE WORK OF '63.

Proportions of the conflict.—New calls for troops.—The Emancipation Proclamation.—Capture of Arkansas Post.—Movements against Vicksburg.—The fleet passes the batteries.—Grant at Bruinsburg.—Battles of Port Gibson, Raymond, Jackson, and Champion Hills.—The siege and capture of Vicksburg.—Fall of Port Hudson.—Cavalry raids of Jackson, Stuart, and Grierson.—Rosecrans drives Bragg across the Tennessee.—Battle of Chattanooga.—And the siege.—Storming of Lookout and Missionary Ridge.—Longstreet in Tennessee.—Siege of Knoxville.—Engagements at Springfield, Cape Girardeau, and Helena.—The sacking of Lawrence.—Capture of Little Rock.—Morgan invades Indiana.—Passes into Ohio.—Is hemmed in and captured.—The Confederates take Galveston.—The siege of Charleston.—Hooker commands the Army of the Potomac.—Battle of Chancellorsville.—Death of Stonewall Jackson.—Stoneman's raid.—Siege of Suffolk.—Lee invades Pennsylvania.—The battle of Gettysburg.—Retreat of the Confederates.—The conscription.—Riot in New York.—The draft.—New calls for soldiers.—West Virginia a State. 510-523.

CHAPTER LXVI.

THE CLOSING CONFLICTS.

Sherman's campaign to Meridian.—Smith fails to form a junction.—Sherman retires to Vicksburg.—Forrest's raid.—The Red River expedition.—Plan of the campaign.—Capture of Fort de Russy, Alexandria, and Natchitoches.—Union disaster and retreat.—Steele falls back to Little Rock.—Grant lieutenant-general.—Plan of the campaigns of '64.—Sherman advances.—Battles of Dalton, Resaca, and Dallas.—Attacks and repulses at Kenesaw.—The Confederates fall back to Atlanta.—Siege and capture of the stronghold.—Hood invades Tennessee.—Thomas sent to confront him.—Battle of Franklin.—Siege of Nashville.—Rout and ruin of Hood's army.—Sherman's march to the sea.—Capture of Macon, Milledgeville, Gibson, and Waynesborough.—Storming of Fort McAllister.—Escape of Hardee.—And capture of the city.—The Union army in Savannah.—Renewal of the march.—Columbia, Charleston, and Fayetteville are taken.—Battle of Kilpatrick's and Hampton's Cavalry.—Johnston restored to command.—Battles of Averasborough and Bentonville.—Capture of Goldsborough and Raleigh.—Great raid of Stoneman.—Surrender of Johnston.—Farragut enters Mobile Bay.—Defeats the Confederate squadron.—Captures Forts Gaines and Morgan.—Fort Fisher is besieged by Porter and Butler.—The first effort fails.—The siege is renewed.—And the fort taken by storm.—Cushing's exploit.—The Confederate cruisers.—Injury done to the commerce of the United States.—The Savannah.—Career of the Sumter.—Cruise of the Nashville.—The Confederates use the British ship-yards.—Building of the Florida.—Her fate.—The Georgia, the Olustee, the Shenandoah, and the Chickamauga built at Glasgow.—End of the Chickamauga and the Tallahassee.—Career of the Georgia and the Shenandoah.—The Alabama.—Her character.—She scours the ocean.—Runs into Cherbourg.—Is caught by the Kearsarge.—And destroyed.—The Army of the Potomac moves from Culpepper.—Reaches the Wilderness.—The battles.—Grant advances to Spottsylvania.—Terrible fighting there.—The Union army moves to Cold Harbor.—Is repulsed in two battles.—Losses.—Grant changes base.—Butler captures Bermuda and City Point.—Is driven back by Beauregard.—Junction of the armies.—Advance on Petersburg.—The assaults.—The siege begins.—Sigel on the Shenandoah.—Battle of New Market.—Hunter in command.—Engagement at Piedmont.—Retreat of Hunter.—Early enters the valley.—Crosses the Potomac.—Defeats Wallace.—Threatens Washington and Baltimore.—Retreats into Virginia.—Fight at Winchester.—The Confederates burn Chambersburg.—Sheridan is sent into the valley.—Battles of Winchester and Fisher's Hill.—Sheridan ravages the country.—Early comes.—Routs the Federals at Cedar Creek.—Sheridan returns, and destroys Early's army.—The siege of Petersburg continues.—Battles of Boydton and Five Forks.—Flight of the Confederate government.—Fall of Petersburg and Richmond.—Surrender of Lee.—Collapse of the Confederacy.—The Federal authority is re-established.—Capture, imprisonment, and trial of Davis.—Lincoln re-elected.—Financial condition of the country.—Treasury notes.—Internal Revenue.—Legal Tenders.—Bonds.—Banks.—The debt.—Lincoln is reinaugurated.—Visits Richmond.—Is assassinated.—Punishment of his murderers.—Character of Lincoln. 523-543.

CHAPTER LXVII.

JOHNSON'S ADMINISTRATION.

Johnson in the presidency.—Sketch of his life and character.—Slavery is formally abolished.—The Amnesty Proclamation.—A struggle with the war-debt.—Napoleon's empire in Mexico.—Maximilian is captured and shot.—Final success of the Atlantic telegraph.—The Postal Money-Order system is established.—The Territories assume their final form.—Alaska is purchased from Russia.—The difficulty between the President and Congress.—The reconstruction imbroglio.—Second amnesty.—The Civil Rights Bill is passed.—The Southern States are re-admitted.—A national convention at Philadelphia.—The President makes a tour of the country.—Congressional measures of reconstruction.—The breach is widened between the executive and Congress.—The vetoing business.—The President removes Stanton.—Is impeached.—And acquitted.—General Grant is elected President. 544-551.

CHAPTER LXVIII.

GRANT'S ADMINISTRATION.

Sketch of President Grant.—The Pacific Railroad is completed.—The Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments to the Constitution are adopted.—The story of Black Friday.—The Southern States are restored to their place in the Union.—The ninth census and its lesson.—The Santo Domingo business.—The Alabama claims are adjusted by the treaty of Washington and the Geneva court.—Railroad development of the United States.—The burning of Chicago.—The North-western boundary is settled by arbitration.—The presidential election.—The candidates.—Grant is re-elected.—Character of Greeley.—His death.—Great fire in Boston.—The Modoc war.—Murder of the peace commissioners.—The savages are subdued.—The Louisiana imbroglio.—The Credit Mobilier investigation.—The financial crisis of 1872-74.—The Northern Pacific Railroad enterprise.—Admission of Colorado.—Death-rol of eminent men.—Sketches of Sumner and Wilson.—The great Centennial.—Origination of the enterprise.—Opposition.—General plan of the Exposition.—Organization.—The monetary management.—Lukewarmness of the Government.—The Centennial Grounds.—Dedication.—The General Regulations.—Nations participating.—Classification of products.—The Centennial Buildings.—Descriptions of the same.—Main Building.—Memorial Hall.—Machinery Hall.—Agricultural Hall.—Horticultural Hall.—United States Government Building.—Woman's Pavilion.—Foreign and State Buildings.—Reception of materials.—Scheme of Awards.—Opening ceremonies.—The Exposition itself.—Description of exhibits in Main Building.—In Machinery Hall.—In the Government Building.—In Agricultural Hall.—In Horticultural Hall.—In the Woman's Pavilion.—In Memorial Hall.—The celebration of the Fourth of July in Philadelphia.—Attendance at the Exposition.—The closing ceremonies.—The Sioux War.—The great election of 1876.—A disputed presidency.—The result. 552-633

CHAPTER LXIX.

HAYES'S ADMINISTRATION.

Sketch of President Hayes.—His inaugural address.—The policy indicated.—Effect of the same upon the country.—The new cabinet is organized.—The great Railroad Strike breaks out.—And is suppressed.—Beginning of the Nez Perce War.—The tribe is subdued by General Howard.—Silver is remonetized.—The Yellow Fever epidemic in the South.—The Halifax Fishery Commission.—How constituted.—The award.—A Chinese Embassy established in the United States.—A Life Saving Service is instituted by Congress.—Resumption of Specie Payments by the Government.—Issues of 1880.—Garfield elected President.—Refunding legislation.—Tour of Ex-President Grant.—Results of the Census of 1880.—Death of Senator Morton, William Cullen Bryant, Bayard Taylor, and Senators Chandler and Carpenter. 633-646

CHAPTER LXX.

ADMINISTRATIONS OF GARFIELD AND ARTHUR.

Sketch of President Garfield.—His inaugural.—The new cabinet.—Question of Civil Service Reform.—Break in the Republican Party.—Assassination of the President.—Accession of Arthur.—Sketch of the new executive.—Cabinet changes.—Star-Route conspiracy.—Applications of science.—The telephone.—The phonograph.—The electric light.—The Brooklyn bridge.—Party questions of 1884.—The tariff issue.—Doctrine of free-trade.—Incidental protection.—Limited protection.—High protection.—Prohibitory tariffs.—Presidential contest of 1884.—Election of Cleveland and Hendricks.—Transfer of the command of the army.—The Washington Monument. 647-671

CHAPTER LXXI.

CLEVELAND'S ADMINISTRATION.

Sketch of President Cleveland.—The new cabinet.—Question of Civil Service Reform.—Struggle for office.—Revival of War memories.—Literature on the subject.—Death of General Grant.—Of General McClellan.—Of General Hancock.—Of General Logan.—Of Vice-President Hendricks.—Of Horatio Seymour.—Of Samuel J. Tilden.—Of Henry Ward Beecher.—Of Chief-Justice Waite.—Historical sketch of the Supreme Court.—Appointment of Melville W. Fuller.—Death of Roscoe Conkling.—His life and character.—The labor agitations and strikes of 1886-88.—The Hay-market riot in Chicago.—The Charleston earthquake.—The Forty-ninth Congress.—Question of extending the Pension list.—The Interstate Commerce Bill.—Political excitements of 1888.—Questions at issue.—Protection to American Industry.—Attitude of the Parties.—Nominations for the Presidency.—The result.—Admission of South and North Dakota, Montana, and Washington.—Institution of the Department of Agriculture 672-695

CHAPTER LXXII.

HARRISON'S ADMINISTRATION.

Sketch of President Harrison.—His cabinet.—Centenary of the American Government.—Crises of the Revolutionary Epoch.—Declaration of Independence.—Formation of the Constitution.—Its adoption.—Institution of the Government in 1789.—Sketch of the ceremonies of Washington's Inauguration.—His Journey to New York.—His reception.—Character of New York in 1789.—Inaugural programme prepared by Congress.—The Washingtonian procession.—The Inauguration proper.—First policy of the Government.—The Centennial commemoration of 1889.—Preparations for the event.—The throng in New York.—Coming of President Harrison and his company.—Decoration of the city.—Receptions of the Presidential Party, Literary Exercises.—Whittier's Poem and Depew's oration.—The Military Parade.—Features of the great Procession.—Sketch of the various divisions.—Metropolitan Banquets.—The Civic parade.—Its historical features.—Management of the throngs.—Difficulty with Germany relative to Samoa.—Causes of the controversy.—Wreck of the American and German fleets.—The Embassy to Berlin.—Meeting of Pan-American Congress.—Representatives thereto.—Subjects discussed and results.—Work of the International Maritime Conference.—Résumé of discussions and Acts of the Fifty-first Congress.—The McKinley Bill.—New rules for the government of the House. The Elections Bill.—Movement for the free coinage of silver.—Questions connected therewith.—Statehood for Idaho and Wyoming.—Census of 1890.—Deaths of Sheridan, Sherman and Johnston.—The Italian embroglio at New Orleans.—Serious complication with Italy.—Difficulty between the United States and Chili.—Affair of the Itata.—Overthrow of Balma-ceda.—The mob in Valparaiso.—Threatenings of war.—Settlement of the difficulty. Behring Sea controversy with Great Britain.—Commission appointed to arbitrate meet at Paris, France.—Question of restoring American influence on high seas.—Great war-ships constructed.—Methods of reducing surplus in Treasury.—Expenses of Government increased to more than a billion dollars.—Danger of National deficit.—James G. Blaine resigns his office as Secretary of State.—Nominations for Presidency.—Result.—Democratic control of Senate and House of Representatives for ensuing quadrennium.—Death of James G. Blaine. 696-750

CHAPTER LXXIII.

SECOND ADMINISTRATION OF CLEVELAND.

Character and place of the new President.—His cabinet.—His appointments to Office.—Four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America.—Preparations to celebrate the event.—Chicago chosen.—Scale of expenditures.—Celebration in New York City.—Initial ceremonies in Chicago.—The great parade.—Fireworks and dedication of buildings.—Cleveland's second inaugural.—Formal opening of the Columbian Exposition.—Manufacturers' Building.—The Lagoon.—Nature and variety of the exhibits.—The Government Building.—Viking Ship and Columbian Caravels.—Convent of La Rabida.—Great ordnance.—Foreign villages and barbarous tribes.—Building of the Fine Arts.—Various national displays.—Electricity Building.—Transportation Building.—Horticultural Exhibit.—Midway Plaisance.—Javanese, Moors and Copts.—The Ferris Wheel.—The Columbian Congresses.—Conclusion.—Killing of Mayor Harrison.—Disposition of the buildings.—The conflagration.—Receipts and expenditures.—Peopling the Cherokee strip.—Repeal of the Sherman Law.—Passage of the Wilson Tariff Law Bill.—Strikes and lockouts.—Army of the Commonwealth.—Labor riots in the

Ohio Valley.—Elections of 1894.—Beginning of Imperialism.—The Hawaiian Imbroglío.—The Behring Sea Award against the United States.—Industrial disturbances in New England.—Strike against the Pullman Car Company.—Insurrection in Chicago.—Prosecution of Debs and others.—Death list of the period.—Admission of Utah.—Forest fires in the Northwest.—Proposed increase of the army.—Great Bond Issues of 1894-95.—The Tax on Incomes.—Beginning of the Cuban complication.—Spread of the Rebellion.—Killing of Maceo.—Transformation of Central America.—Decision against the Income Tax.—Consolidation of Libraries in New York.—Prodigious growth of that city.—Gain of the Republicans in 1895.—Project to cancel the Treasury Notes.—Venezuelan difficulty with Great Britain.—Sale of additional bonds.—The Bermuda affair.—Faux pas of Ambassador Bayard.—Revival of the Olympian Games.—Extension of the Civil Service List.—Creation of Greater New York.—National Conventions and Platforms of 1896.—Election of the Republican candidates.—Polar expedition of Nansen. 751-789

CHAPTER LXXIV.

MCKINLEY'S ADMINISTRATION.

The new President and his cabinet.—Political oscillations of the age.—Dedication of Grant's tomb.—The Annexation of Hawaii.—Passage of the Dingley Tariff Bill.—Straining of relations between the United States and Spain.—Destruction of the Maine.—Sudden precipitation of War.—The Fleets and Armies.—Forces and Resources of the Spaniards.—Destruction of the Spanish Fleet at Manila.—Affair at Cardenas.—Descent on Porto Rico.—Call for additional volunteers.—Situation at Santiago de Cuba.—Exploit of Hobson.—Formal Invasion of Cuba.—Sale of Bonds.—Camara's Fleet.—Beginning of actual War.—Battle of San Juan.—Destruction of Cervera's Fleet.—Resolution to annex Hawaii.—Surrender of Santiago.—Miles overruns Porto Rico.—Publication of a Protocol.—Commissioners to Treat of Peace.—Question of establishing Colonial Governments.—Abuses in military management.—Reconciliation of North and South.—Ravages of disease.—Bad supply system.—Work of the Peace Commissioners.—Questions at issue.—The Treaty Stipulations.—Conclusion. 790-813

CHAPTER LXXV.

CONCLUSION.

The outlook for the Republic.—Byron's view of nations.—The hopeful side.—Present achievements of the United States.—Natural advantages.—How the Saxon has improved them.—Things necessary to the perpetuity of American institutions: First, National Unity.—Second, Universal Education.—Third, Toleration.—Fourth, The Nobility of Labor.—Reflections. 814-817

APPENDIXES.

APPENDIX A.—Mandeville's Argument	818
APPENDIX B.—Franklin's Constitution	822
APPENDIX C.—Declaration of Independence	824
APPENDIX D.—Articles of Confederation.	827
APPENDIX E.—Constitution of the United States	833
APPENDIX F.—Washington's Farewell Address	844
APPENDIX G.—The Emancipation Proclamation	854
VOCABULARY	856
CENSUS.	859
INDEX	867