CONTENTS OF VOL. II

BOOK IX—continued

CHAP	PAGE
V. An apology for all heroes who have good stomachs, with a description of a battle of the amorous kind	1
VI. A friendly conversation in the kitchen, which had a very common, though not very friendly, conclusion	5
VII. Containing a fuller account of Mrs. Waters, and by what means she came into that distressful situation from which she was rescued by Jones.	10

BOOK X

IN WHICH THE HISTORY GOES FORWARD ABOUT TWELVE HOURS

I. Containing instructions very necessary to be perused by modern critics	15
II. Containing the arrival of an Irish gentleman, with very extraordinary adventures which ensued at the inn	17
III. A dialogue between the landlady and Susan the chambermaid, proper to be read by all inn-keepers and their servants; with the arrival, and affable behaviour of a beautiful young lady; which may teach persons of condition how they may acquire the love of the whole world	22
IV. Containing infallible instructions for procuring universal esteem and hatred	27
V. Showing who the amiable lady, and her unamiable maid were	29
VI. Containing, among other things, the ingenuity of Partridge, the madness of Jones, and the folly of Fitzpatrick	34
VII. In which are concluded the adventures that happened at the inn at Upton	37
VIII. In which the history goes backward	41
IX. The escape of Sophia	45

BOOK XI

CHAP.	CONTAINING ABOUT THREE DAYS	PAGE
I.	A crust for the critics	53
II.	The adventures which Sophia met with after her leaving Upton	57
III.	A very short chapter, in which however is a sun, a moon, a star, and an angel	63
IV.	The history of Mrs. Fitzpatrick	65
V.	In which the history of Mrs. Fitzpatrick is continued	70
VI.	In which the mistake of the landlord throws Sophia into a dreadful consternation	74
VII.	In which Mrs. Fitzpatrick concludes her history	77
VIII.	A dreadful alarm in the inn, with the arrival of an unexpected friend of Mrs. Fitzpatrick	84
IX.	The morning introduced in some pretty writing. A stage-coach. The civility of chambermaids. The heroic temper of Sophia. Her generosity. The return to it. The departure of the company, and their arrival at London; with some remarks for the use of travellers	89
X.	Containing a hint or two concerning virtue, and a few more concerning suspicion	93

BOOK XII

CHAP.	CONTAINING THE SAME INDIVIDUAL TIME WITH THE FORMER	PAGE
I.	Showing what is to be deemed plagiarism in a modern author, and what is to be considered as lawful prize	99
II.	In which, though the squire doth not find his daughter, something is found which puts an end to his pursuit	101
III.	The departure of Jones from Upton, with what passed between him and Partridge on the road	104
IV.	The adventure of a beggar-man	108
V.	Containing more adventures which Mr. Jones and his companion met on the road	112
VI.	From which it may be inferred that the best things are liable to be misunderstood and misinterpreted	116
VII.	Containing a remark or two of our own, and many more of the good company assembled in the kitchen	118
VIII.	In which fortune seems to have been in a better humour with Jones than we have hitherto seen her	123

CHAP.	PAGE
IX.	Containing little more than a few odd observations	127
X.	In which Mr. Jones and Mr. Dowling drink a bottle together	130
XI.	The disasters which befel Jones on his departure for Coventry; with the sage remarks of Partridge	134
XII.	Relates that Mr. Jones continued his journey, contrary to the advice of Partridge, with what happened on that occasion	137
XIII.	A dialogue between Jones and Partridge	144
XIV.	What happened to Mr. Jones in his journey from St. Albans	148

BOOK XIII

CHAP.	CONTAINING THE SPACE OF TWELVE DAYS	PAGE
I.	An invocation	153
II.	What befel Mr. Jones on his arrival in London	155
III.	A project of Mrs. Fitzpatrick, and her visit to Lady Bellaston	160
IV.	Which consists of visiting	163
V.	An adventure which happened to Mr. Jones at his lodgings, with some account of a young gentleman who lodged there, and of the mistress of the house, and her two daughters	165
VI.	What arrived while the company were at breakfast, with some hints concerning the government of daughters	170
VII.	Containing the whole humours of a masquerade	175
VIII.	Containing a scene of distress, which will appear very extraordinary to most of our readers	180
IX.	Which treats of matters of a very different kind from those in the preceding chapter	184
X.	A chapter which, though short, may draw tears from some eyes	187
XI.	In which the reader will be surprised	190
XII.	In which the thirteenth book is concluded	195

BOOK XIV

CHAP.	CONTAINING TWO DAYS	PAGE
I.	An essay to prove that an author will write the better for having some knowledge of the subject on which he writes	199
II.	Containing letters and other matters which attend amours	202
III.	Containing various matters	206
IV.	Which we hope will be very attentively perused by young people of both sexes	210
V.	A short account of the history of Mrs. Miller	213
VI.	Containing a scene which we doubt not will affect all our readers	217

CHAP.	PAGE
VII. The interview between Mr. Jones and Mr. Nightingale	221
VIII. What passed between Jones and old Mr. Nightingale; with the arrival of a person not yet mentioned in this history	226
IX. Containing strange matters	223
X. A short chapter, which concludes the book	235

BOOK XV

IN WHICH THE HISTORY ADVANCES ABOUT TWO DAYS

I. Too short to need a preface	237
II. In which is opened a very black design against Sophia	238
III. A further explanation of the foregoing design	242
IV. By which it will appear how dangerous an advocate a lady is when she applies her eloquence to an ill purpose	246
V. Containing some matters which may affect, and others which may surprise, the reader	247
VI. By what means the squire came to discover his daughter	253
VII. In which various misfortunes befel poor Jones	257
VIII. Short and sweet	263
IX. Containing love-letters of several sorts	265
X. Consisting partly of facts, and partly of observations upon them	271
XI. Containing curious, but not unprecedented matter	274
XII. A discovery made by Partridge	277

BOOK XVI

CONTAINING THE SPACE OF FIVE DAYS

I. Of prologue	281
II. A whimsical adventure which befel the squire, with the distressed situation of Sophia	282
III. What happened to Sophia during her confinement	289
IV. In which Sophia is delivered from her confinement	292
V. In which Jones receives a letter from Sophia, and goes to a play with Mrs. Miller and Partridge	296
VI. In which the history is obliged to look back	302
VII. In which Mr. Western pays a visit to his sister, in company with Mr. Blifil	305
VIII. Schemes of Lady Bellaston for the ruin of Jones	307
IX. In which Jones pays a visit to Mrs. Fitzpatrick	311
X. The consequence of the preceding visit	315

BOOK XVII

CONTAINING THREE DAYS

CHAP.	PAGE
I. Containing a portion of introductory writing	319
II. The generous and grateful behaviour of Mrs. Miller	320
III. The arrival of Mr. Western, with some matters concerning the paternal authority	323
IV. An extraordinary scene between Sophia and her aunt	330
V. Mrs. Miller and Mr. Nightingale visit Jones in the prison	334
VI. In which Mrs. Miller pays a visit to Sophia	337
VII. A pathetic scene between Mr. Allworthy and Mrs. Miller	340
VIII. Containing various matters	342
IX. What happened to Mr. Jones in the prison	348

BOOK XVIII

CONTAINING ABOUT SIX DAYS

I. A farewell to the reader	353
II. Containing a very tragical incident	354
III. Allworthy visits old Nightingale; with a strange discovery that he made on that occasion	359
IV. Containing two letters in very different stiles	363
V. In which the history is continued	366
VI. In which the history is farther continued	371
VII. Continuation of the history	374
VIII. Further continuation	378
IX. A further continuation	386
X. Wherein the history begins to draw towards a conclusion	392
XI. The history draws nearer to a conclusion	397
XII. Approaching still nearer to the end	402
XIII. In which the history is concluded	408
