NOTE

In 1902 the illustrator of this book, Mr. Thomas Fogarty, made an extensive trip with the author through the forest tracts of northern Michigan, visiting remote lumber camps and making first-hand acquaintance with the various scenes described by Mr. White. His pictures embody the material of many sketches and thus constitute a record of fact of equal authority with the text itself. Author and publisher alike feel that this credit should be given to Mr. Fogarty's pictures for their strict veracity while permitting the poetic quality of their interpretation of the wilderness to speak for itself.
